FOREIGN NEWS

The Royal steamship Arabia arrived at Portland Maine brings English papers to the 6th December. From these papers we copy the important letter of Gen Scott on the Trent affair and some remarks of the English press on the same letter

The excitement in relation to the Trent affair continued unabated

The London Times city article says that the stock market on the 4th instant, was more heavy and unsettled than at any period since the commencement of the difficulty. At the close however, there was a slight rally in the fund

The United States Consul at Paris had communicated to the French papers the following letter from Gen WINFIELD SCOTT

GEN SCOTT'S LETTER

My Dear Sir —You were right in doubting the declaration imputed to me, to wit — That the Cabinet at Washington had given orders to seize Messrs Mason and Slidell even under a neutral flag, for I was not even aware that the Government had had that point even under consideration. At the time of my leaving New York it was not known that the San Jacinto had returned to the American seas and it was generally supposed these persons had escaped to Cuba for the purpose of re embarking in the Nashville in pursuit of which vessel the James Adger and other cruisers had been dispatched

I think I can satisfy you in a few words that you have no serious occasion to feel concerned about our relations with England, if as her rulers profess she has no disposition to encourage the dissensions in America

In the first place, it is almost superfluous to say to you that every instinct of prudence as well as of good neighborhood prompts our Government to regard no honorable sacrifice too great for the preservation of the friendship of Great Britain. This must be clear to all the world. At no period of our history has her friendship been of more importance to our people [illegible] at no period has our Government been in a condition to make greater concessions to preserve it. The two nations are united by interests and sympathies—commercial social political, and religious, almost as the two arms to one body and no one body, and no one is so ignorant as not to know that what harms one must harm the other in a corresponding degree

I am persuaded that the British Government can entertain no doubt upon this point but if it does I feel that I may take it upon myself to say that the President of the United States, when made aware of its existence will lose no opportunity of dispelling it

Nor is there anything I venture to affirm in the seizure of these rebel emissaries which ought to receive an unfriendly construction from England. Her statesmen will not question the legal right of an American vessel of war to search any commercial vessel justly suspected of transporting contraband of war that right has never been surrendered by England, it was even guaranteed to her by the Treaty of Paris, and British guns frowning down upon nearly every strait and inland sea upon the globe are conclusive evidence that she regards this right as one, the efficacy of which may be not yet entirely exhausted. Of course, there is much that is irritating and vexatious in the exercise of this right under the most favorable circumstances and it is to be hoped the day is not far distant when the maritime States of the world will agree in placing neutral commerce beyond the reach of such vexations. The United States Government has been striving to this end for more than fifty years to this end, early in the present century and in its infancy as a nation, it embarked in a war with the greatest naval power in the world, and it is even now a persistent suitor at every maritime Court in Europe for a more liberal recognition of the rights of neutrals than of the other great maritime nations have yet been disposed to make. But till those rights are secured by proper international guarantees, upon a comprehensive and enduring basis, of course England cannot complain of an act for which in all its material bearings her own naval history affords such numerous precedents

Whether the captives from the Trent were contraband of war or not is a question which the two Governments can have no serious difficulty in agreeing upon. If Mr Seward cannot satisfy Earl Russell that they were I have no doubt, Earl Russell will be able to satisfy Mr Seward that they were not. If they were, as all authorities concur in admitting agents of the rebellion, it will be difficult to satisfy impartial minds that they were any less contraband than a file of rebel soldiers or a battery of hostile cannon

But even should there be a difference of opinion upon this point it is very clear that our Government had sufficient grounds for presuming itself in the right, to escape the suspicion of having wantonly violated the relations of amity which the two countries profess a desire to preserve and cultivate

The pretence that we ought to have taken the Trent into port, and had her condemned by a Prize Court, in order to justify our seizure [illegible] furnish a very [illegible] between two great nations. Such [illegible] otherwise [illegible] would have been less if it had been greater. The wrong done to the British flag would have been greater if instead of seizing the four rebels we had seized the ship detained all her passengers for weeks and confiscated her cargo. I am not surprised that Capt. Wilkes took a different view of his duty, and of what was due to the friendly relations which subsist between the two Governments. The [illegible] common sense of the English people I believe, will approve of his effort to make the discharge of a very unpleasant duty as little vexatious as possible to all the interested parties

If, under these circumstances England should deem it her duty in the interest of civilization, to insist upon the restoration of the men taken from under the protection of her flag it will be from a conviction without doubt that the law of nations in regard to the rights of neutrals which she has taken the leading part in establishing requires revision, and with a suitable disposition on her part to establish those rights upon a just, humane and philosophic basis. Indeed, I am happy to see an intimation in one of the leading metropolitan journals which goes far to justify this inference. Referring to the decisions of the English Admiralty Courts, now quoted in defence of the seizure of the American rebels on board the Trent the London Times of Nov 28 says

"So far as the authorities go the testimony of international law writers is all one way that a belligerent war cruiser has the right to stop and visit and search any merchant ship upon the high seas. * * But it must be remembered that these decisions were given under circumstances very different from those which now occur. Steamers in those days did not exist and mail vessels carrying letters wherein all the nations of the world have immediate interest were unknown. We were fighting for existence and we did in those days what we should neither do nor allow others to do nor expect ourselves to be allowed to do in these days."

If England, as we are here encouraged to hope is disposed to do her part in stripping war of half its horrors by accepting the policy long and persistently urged upon her by our Government, and commended by every principle of justice and humanity, she will find no ground in the visit of the Trent, for controversy with our Government. I am sure the President and people of the United States would be but too happy to let these men go free unnatural and unpardonable as their offences have been if by it they could emancipate the commerce of the world. Greatly as it would be to our disadvantage at the present crisis to surrender any of those maritime privileges of belligerents which are sanctioned by the law of nations I feel that I take no responsibility in saying that the United States will be faithful to her traditional policy upon this subject, and to the spirit of her political institutions

On the other hand, should England be unprepared to make a corresponding sacrifice should she feel that she could not yet afford to surrender the advantages which the present maritime code gives to a dominant naval power, of course she will not put herself in a false position by asking us to do it. In either case therefore, I do not see how the friendly relations of the two Governments are in any immediate danger of being disturbed

That the over prompt recognition, as belligerents of a body of men however large so long as they constituted a manifest minority of the nation wounded the feelings of my countrymen deeply, I will not affect to deny, nor that that act, with some of its logical consequences which have already occurred has planted in the breasts of many the suspicion that their kindred in England wish them evil rather than good, but the statesmen to whom the political interests of these two great people are confided act upon higher responsibilities and with better lights, and you may rest assured that in event so mutually disastrous as a war between England and America cannot occur without some other and graver provocation than has yet been given by either nation

WINFIELD SCOTT

Hotel Westminster, Paris, Dec 2, 1861

The London Star thinks that Gen Scott's letter will receive a hearty response in England as a message of peace

The London Times says that Gen Scott like his countrymen, is rather inclined to disavow the conception of the outrage than to repudiate it, now that it has been done

WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEB [illegible]

The Late News

We have [illegible] the [illegible] United States

Lord Palmerston's organ [illegible] of 2d December, expresses the hope that the American government will [illegible] their officer [illegible] American waters, including the Mexican expedition, and ships already there [illegible] amounting to not far from five th[illegible] with which we could sweep all the [illegible] from the seas, blockade the Northern ports and turn to a direct and speedy issue the war which is now raging."

The Times says that the law officers of the Crown have decided the seizure of Slidell and Mason unjustifiable, and reparation must be demanded.

The London News says: "Beneath everything there exists an under current of apprehension, lest the American Government really contemplate the desperate policy of seeking to fasten a quarrel on Great Britain in order to gain a standing ground for abandoning its designs of subjugating herself."

The London Times further says that Gen. Scott had declared at Paris that the seizure was contemplated by the American Cabinet, and the Post concurs and adds: "The demand of Lord Lyons will be plain and brief, and if not complied with diplomatic relations will be immediately suspended."

The Queen called a Cabinet council and by proclamation forbade the exportation of any arms, gunpowder and saltpetre from the country.

The London Observer states that a special messenger had been sent to Lord Lyons with instructions, and intimates that the traitors should be restored to the quarter deck of an English man of war in the face of ten or twelve British men of war on the Potomac.

Munitions of war were being sent in large amounts to Canada.

The London Times says that the breaking up of the American blockade would restore prosperity to Lancashire.

Large quantities of lead were being shipped to New York—the exportation of that article not being interdicted by the Queen.

On the 29th November, Lord Russell prepared his dispatch for Lord Lyons. The Times says it was couched in the firmest language, and presumes the Federal Government will disavow the act. The News has but small hope of disavowal, and says that it becomes the Government to be prepared in Canada for a war with the Northern States.

The presses of other British cities demand a disavowal and full reparation.

A Liverpool paper of the 21 says that there is less cause to fear a rupture between the two countries, and it was rumored that the Cabinet was modifying its instructions to Lord Lyons.

Letters from Paris state that the news of the American difficulty produced immense excitement there. The French press take the same view of the act of the Jacinto as is taken by the press of England.

The Paris Patrie has an article indicating that France might recognize the South, if England set the example.

LONDON, Dec 6—LATEST.—An Admiralty notice was issued yesterday, requiring all men on leave of absence to return immediately to their respective ships.

The iron-clad frigate Warrior is coaling for service on the North American coast if needed.

There was quite a rise yesterday in sugar and saltpetre.

[illegible]

[illegible] As soon as the two countries [illegible] difference will [illegible]

While no apprehension need be felt in reference to any capitulation [illegible] Government, we have equal confidence that the dispatches from the British Government will be [illegible] The communication between the two will have little in common with the ebullitions of popular feeling on either side. These were caused by apprehension and alarm at the consequences of war [illegible] any desire for one, which is universally deprecated by the great majority on both sides. We predict we shall get out of this entanglement, in which we were entangled without any design of our own, as speedily as we fell into it.

The Times says that news had been received in San Francisco from Washington as late as the 13th, when the steamer left, to the effect that Mr. Stark had been refused a seat in the Senate, all the members voting against him, but Messrs. Nesmith, McDougall and Latham. This news may be correct, but we shall think it strange if Senator Bright did not vote in favor of giving him the seat.

FIRES IN THE INTERIOR.—The house of Mr. Stephen [illegible] near Silverton, was totally consumed by fire on the night of the 25th. The origin of the fire is not known. The house was occupied by the families of [illegible] and James Murray [illegible] were at the time [illegible] children asleep in the house. They were rescued with much difficulty. [illegible] of the furniture was saved [illegible] $200.—Oregon Statesman

On the night of the 28th ult. the dwelling house of Mr. [illegible] was destroyed by fire. The building was discovered to be on fire directly after the family had retired to rest, and the rapid spread of the flames prevented their removing anything whatever from it [illegible] the wearing apparel they had [illegible] themselves [illegible] The origin of the fire is not known.—Oregon Democrat

SOMETHING MORE THAN A SHOWER.—Owing to the fact that General Sherman has not seen fit to occupy Beaufort or march on Savannah and Charleston, some of the Southern journals are inclined to look upon the expedition to South Carolina as nothing but a shower after all. But when the expeditions of Butler, Burnside and Potter on the Atlantic—of Halleck and Foote on the Mississippi, and the armies that are assembled in Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri, shall have fulfilled their missions, as it is probably they will be in a fair way of doing within a month, the delusion of the rebels will be dispelled and they will be compelled, like the man that refused admittance to Noah's ark, to admit that the flood which is overwhelming them is something more than a shower after all.—New York Herald

General News.

A collection was taken in all the Catholic churches of San Francisco on the [illegible]th for the benefit of the sufferers by the floods which were then devastating the State.

The steamer Aunt, on her way up to Sacramento from San Francisco, took from the tops of the houses and other perilous positions a large number of men, women and children. In one or two instances they were taken from trees.

There was a terrible snow-slide at Excelsior Hill, near Monte Christo, (near Downieville,) which carried off a store, dwelling house, and cabin, and buried G. W. Johnson, G. Martin, Henry Larned and two Frenchmen. Martin and the Frenchmen were dug out. Johnson, Buell, Marshall (from Illinois) and Larned were missing.

Letters from the City of Mexico of the 19th December state that the constitutional government was ready to yield to the just demands of England France and Spain; but would go no further. A general amnesty had been proclaimed, and the rebel generals had united with the government. A large demand had been made for troops on the different States, with prospects of success.

SEWING MACHINES

ARE UNEQUALLED BY ANY FOR

BEAUTY AND SIMPLICITY OF CONSTRUCTION

—AND—

Efficiency in Working.

A GOOD SEWING MACHINE

SHOULD BE WELL MADE, simple in its construction, and easily kept in order. [illegible] should sew all materials [illegible].

[illegible]

The needle should have perpendicular motion, [illegible] heavy work.

It should be able to bind with a binder, hem with a hemmer [illegible] always ready to work.

It should be capable of using the same size thread for both sides of the work, or of using different colors [illegible] two colors of cloth to be united.

It should be able to make a long or short stitch, and to fasten off the seam, and commence sewing tightly at the first stitch, and to run easily, and make but little noise.

It should have a wheel-feed; no others are in constant contact with the work.

It should not be liable to get out of order; neither should it require a screw-driver or wrench to set the needle.

It should not be liable to soil the operator's dress.

It should not form a ridge on the under side, nor ravel.

SLAVERY.—We have no sympathy with men who think that a distinction should of right be made, says the San Francisco [illegible], between the slave and other property of the rebels, for we cannot see its justice. Wherever the Union cause can be benefited by freeing such slaves, there should be no hesitation in releasing them from bondage. The traitor master is entitled to no consideration for in withdrawing his allegiance from the Government he forfeited all right to its protection. We hope however that even the condition of the negro should be made subservient to the welfare of the Union cause, and that the slave question should in every case be so treated as to secure substantial benefit for the Government.
